Dear Sir,

I have been sending you for the last few weeks a copy of "The Inquirer" which I hope you have found both interesting and valuable.

The Proprietors feel that there is a demand for a weekly journal devoted to Theological and Social questions and free from sectarian bias, among thoughtful men and women of all denominations.

It is the aim of "The Inquirer" to provide a paper of high literary quality, and contributed to by writers of acknowledged standing in the world of Liberal Religious thought, which shall deal sanely and earnestly with questions of Liberal Religious interest in this country and abroad.

We realise of course that such a paper cannot at first have a great circulation but feel sure that, with the advancing tide of Liberal Religious thought and the co-operation of sympathisers in the movement we shall be able to carry out with success the work we are undertaking.

If you have found "The Inquirer" of value to you, I should be very pleased to enter your name upon our list of subscribers and send you a copy weekly, or if you prefer to obtain it from your newsagent, I should be much obliged if you would kindly let me have a postcard from you to that effect.

Also if you could see your way to mention "The Inquirer" to others whom you think would be interested, it would be much appreciated.

I am, Sir,
Yours faithfully,

Secretary.
