

Handwritten text in an ancient script, likely Tamil, arranged in two columns. The text is highly faded and difficult to decipher, but appears to be a form or record. The script is densely packed and covers most of the page's surface.

Fragment of an ancient manuscript, likely containing text in a Semitic script (possibly Hebrew or Aramaic). The text is heavily obscured by ink bleed-through from the reverse side of the page, making it largely illegible. The fragment is rectangular with irregular, torn edges, particularly on the left and bottom sides. The visible text is arranged in approximately 15 horizontal lines. Some faint characters and symbols are discernible, including what appears to be a large initial letter at the beginning of the first line, possibly a letter like 'א' (Aleph) or 'ב' (Beth). The overall appearance is that of a well-preserved but heavily damaged piece of historical parchment or paper.