

DR. K. KOHLER, PRESIDENT HEBREW UNION COLLEGE, 3016 STANTON AVE.

CINCINNATI, O.

June 12th 1904

I have been thinking much lately of the 'Jewish question' in the United States. It is a subject which has long been the subject of much discussion, and which has of late years become more and more prominent in the minds of the people. It is a question which has to do with the future of the Jewish people in this country, and it is one which every Jew who has any interest in his people should be concerned to follow. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a minority, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a race. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation.

I have been thinking much lately of the 'Jewish question' in the United States. It is a subject which has long been the subject of much discussion, and which has of late years become more and more prominent in the minds of the people. It is a question which has to do with the future of the Jewish people in this country, and it is one which every Jew who has any interest in his people should be concerned to follow. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a minority, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a race. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation.

I have been thinking much lately of the 'Jewish question' in the United States. It is a subject which has long been the subject of much discussion, and which has of late years become more and more prominent in the minds of the people. It is a question which has to do with the future of the Jewish people in this country, and it is one which every Jew who has any interest in his people should be concerned to follow. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a minority, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a race. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation. It is a question which has to do with the rights of a people, and it is one which has to do with the rights of a nation.

Dr. K. Kohler
 in charge of the Hebrew Union College
 Dr. K. Kohler