My dear Professor Goldyker My brother has written to me telling of your difficulty-between Prof. Browne and myself. I feared that such a difficulty-would-arise, and I trust that you will believe me that I appreciate very fully the situation in which you found yourself. Under the circumstances you could do nothing else than what you did. Your friendship with Prof.
Browne forbade any other course.

But I trust now that you will persuade him to turn some of his attention to Arabic. An Arabic man is needed badly at Cambridge at present, and the Chair, after all, is a Chair of Arabic. Yours Faithfully,

Wm. B. Macdonald
