Dear Mr. Goldyther

I am very glad to learn from yours of April 27th that you are in better health and spirits. As you evidently look now to doing these articles for Harting I will return your collectanea on Education with my very best thanks. You will need them yourself. We shall not go abroad this year. I have to lecture next winter in Chicago on Muslim religious experiences as in Jones's Varieties of religious experience. I shall use the conversion of al-Buhari, etc and what other religious experiences I can find. Can you refer to any well-marked cases of conversion in the technical sense in Muslim literature? Or of religious experiences in general. In my Development some cases are touched but I am sure there must be many more. By conversion, of course, I mean a sudden awakening and change in the religious life. Students of psychology have much interest is there anything more. With best regards to Mr. Goldyther
