Dear Sir.

I beg to thank you for the review upon my book, "The Preaching of Islam", which you kindly sent me through Messrs. Constable & Co. I feel it a great honour that so distinguished a scholar should have taken any notice of my work, and I am particularly grateful to you for the most valuable indications you have given me as to the lines on which my treatment of the subject may be improved and supplemented, and for the references to literature that I had failed to make acquaintance with. If I ever get the opportunity of bringing out a second edition, I shall do my best to re-write it in accordance with your suggestions.

I trust that I may not be considered to be trespassing too much on your kindness, if I ask you to be so kind as to point out to me any other mistakes that may come under your notice.

I remain
Yours sincerely
T. W. Arnold.
