Dear Sir:-

As you are doubtless aware we are publishing the Jewish Encyclopedia in 12 volumes, and naturally desire to have it as representative a work as possible. For this reason we are sending special invitations to a few of the most eminent scholars who have not yet expressed their willingness to contribute and that they too might be identified with a work of which all Jewish scholars have reason to be proud.

We have consulted the Executive Committee of the Encyclopedia, and they have suggested that the topic "Islam", 5000 words, is one likely to interest you and cause you the least trouble to write. We should feel greatly obliged if you would contribute it within the indicated time and space. If you express your willingness, we are aware that the pecuniary considerations which we can afford will have no weight in your decision, but have thought it right to put the matter upon a business basis, and for this reason have enclosed the accompanying contract which we trust you will return to us signed.

Yours faithfully,

Funk & Wagnalls Company
