My dear Professor Goldziker,

Many thanks for yours of 31st May, duly received. The Publishers desire me to say that they are glad to know that you think it likely you will be able to undertake the work in 1898, but quite understand that you wish to postpone a definite decision till then.

They willingly agree that the honorarium for your editorial trouble shall be thirty pounds (£ 30), and that the translating and seeing through the press shall be at their charge. I shall hope to communicate with you soon with reference to Smith's annotated copy of Kinship, and meanwhile

I ^{send} enclose along with this a set of the Scotsman letters. I am in no hurry for their return, but should be glad to hear of your early convenience that your impressions are with reference to them.

Yours very sincerely
John Black
